OPINION OF COURT OF APPEALS

A copy of the Memorandum Decision of the Court of Appeals is attached to the Addendum at Tab 1.

STATEMENT OF JURISDICTION

The Utah Supreme Court has jurisdiction over this matter under the provisions of Utah Code Ann. § 78A-3-102(3)(a) and Rule 45 of the Utah Rules of Appellate Procedure.

STATEMENT OF ISSUES

1. Whether the Court of Appeals erred in its construction and application of relevant precedent to Petitioner's claim for severance damages for loss of view.

Standard of Review: The interpretation and construction of relevant precedent is reviewed on appeal for correctness. See Wardley Better Homes and Gardens v. Cannon, 2002 UT 99, ¶ 12, 61 P.3d 1009 ("We review the court of appeals' decision for correctness, and give its conclusions of law no deference."); Bearden v. Croft, 2001 UT 76, ¶ 5, 31 P.3d 537 ("Correctness is also the standard for review of questions of statutory interpretation."); State v. Montoya, 887 P.2d 857 (Utah 1994) ("A court of appeals' interpretation of the effect of a prior judicial decision, whether one of its own or one of another court, constitutes a conclusion of law to which we accord no particular deference. Review is for correctness.").

2. Whether damages for loss of view may be segregated from overall severance damages.

Standard of Review: The Utah Supreme Court reviews the decision of the Court of Appeals for correctness, giving its conclusions of law no deference. See Bear River Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wall, 1999 UT 33, ¶ 5, 978 P.2d 460 (“On certiorari, we review the decision of the court of appeals, not the decision of the trial court. We review the court of appeals’ decision for correctness and give its conclusions of law no deference.”) (internal citations omitted).

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS, STATUTES, ORDINANCES AND RULES

Utah Constitution, Article 1, § 22.

§ 78B-6-511(2), Utah Code Annotated.

Rule 45, Utah Rules of Appellate Procedures.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellee Utah Department of Transportation (“UDOT”) filed its Complaint in this case (Case No. 970905361) on July 31, 1997, seeking to condemn a portion of property (the “Mark Property”) then owned by Mark Investment Company for purposes of the I-15 reconstruction project. (R. 11-20.)

Prior to the reconstruction of I-15, both the north and south bound travel lanes were at about the same elevation as the Admiral and Mark Properties. This afforded Admiral an open view to the east from Ensign Peak on the north to Mount Timpanogos on the south. As a part of the I-15 reconstruction, the travel lanes were elevated to a height of some 27 feet thereby obstructing any view to the east from the remainder and leaving the remainder property in a virtual hole. (R. 181, 494-95.)

The Mark Property was purchased by Admiral on July 22, 1998 (R. 172), based upon fair market value appraisal of both the Mark Property and the adjoining Admiral Property, dated November 25, 1994, prepared by Jerry R. Webber, MAI. (R. 773-74.)

On August 1, 1997, UDOT filed its Complaint in Case No. 970905368 seeking to condemn a portion of the neighboring piece of property (the “Admiral Property”), which was owned by Admiral, also for purposes of the I-15 reconstruction project. (R. 1-10.)

The Admiral Property was purchased by Admiral on April 20, 2001 (R. 172-73), based upon a second fair market value appraisal prepared by Jerry R. Webber, dated October 17, 1996. (R. 773-74.) Jerry Webber also prepared a third fair market value appraisal of both the Mark Property and the Admiral Property dated September 7, 2007, as Admiral’s expert witness in this case. Id. Admiral subsequently purchased the Mark property from Mark Investment Company. As a result, on July 14, 1999, the trial court entered an order consolidating Case No. 970905368 into this case, Case No. 970905361. (R. 63-64.)

In early 2005, the parties filed cross motions in limine regarding the type of evidence that would be admissible to prove Admiral’s severance damages. (R. 151-163, 168-189.) Following oral argument, on October 31, 2005, Judge Stephen L. Roth entered a Memorandum Decision and Order, wherein he granted UDOT’s motion in limine and denied Admiral’s cross motion in limine (“Judge Roth’s Order”). (Addendum Tab 2) (R. 492-502.) The effect to Judge Roth’s Order, dated October 31, 2005, was to eliminate all of Admiral’s claims for severance damages. (R. 500-501.)

However, Judge Roth noted the patent unfairness to Admiral of his ruling in a footnote at page 10 of his decision:

The facts of this case illustrate the sometimes arbitrary nature of the rule that the court has relied on in making its decision here. Without so finding, it is certainly possible that the court's decision would have been significantly different if the offending elevated freeway ramp had been built six inches within, rather than six inches outside, the condemned parcel 109. In this regard Admiral has advanced an argument that has special appeal given the harsh result the difference of a matter of inches may produce. That argument proposes that if a taking is part of an integrated project (which Admiral argues is the case here), the landowner should be entitled to compensation for damages resulting from specific improvements related to the purpose of the taking and causing specific injury to the remainder, even if they were not constructed within the immediate boundaries of the take. See Admiral Beverage Corporation's Reply Memorandum in Support of Its Motion in Limine . . . , at 6-10. This approach recognizes that the actual reduction in value of the remainder from the improvement, as a practical matter, may be no different when it is located just within or just outside of the taken parcel.

The court believes, however, that the repeated (and apparently unequivocal) holdings of the Utah Supreme Court, as addressed above, constrain it from seriously considering such an approach at this level, because it would involve a departure from current law. In this regard, the appellate courts are better equipped to identify, analyze and resolve the competing public and private interests, as well as the legal complications, that would be implicated in such a change in approach to severance damages. The resolution of these issues must therefore be left to some future appeal.

(Addendum Tab 2) (R. at 501.)

Because Judge Roth's Order involved unique legal issues of first impression in Utah, as noted above, he subsequently certified his ruling for appeal under Rule 54(b) of the Utah Rules of Civil Procedure. (R. 522-23.) However, on August 10, 2006, the Utah Court of Appeals dismissed Admiral's appeal without prejudice stating that Judge Roth's Order was "not an order eligible for certification under Rule 54(b)." (R. 556-59.)

Following the dismissal of Admiral's appeal, the case was assigned to the Honorable Robert P. Faust.

In February 2007, the Utah Supreme Court handed down its decision in Ivers v. Utah Dept. of Transp., 2007 UT 19, 154 P.3d 802, which dealt with a factual setting virtually identical to the facts of the present case, as is explained infra.

In mid to late 2007, UDOT filed a series of additional motions in limine seeking to exclude evidence at trial relating to, among other things, Admiral's severance damages caused by the loss of view and visibility. (R. 656-64, 733-35, 780-82.) On December 27, 2007, the trial court entered a Minute Entry, wherein it granted UDOT's motions in limine (the "Minute Entry"). (Addendum Tab 3) (R. 862-64.) The practical effect of the trial court's Minute Entry was that it again disposed of Admiral's claims for severance damages. See id.

Although the Ivers case was referred to and quoted in Admiral's brief in the trial court, Judge Faust's Minute Entry dated December 27, 2007, does not even refer to the Ivers decision, which was handed down ten months earlier. Rather, Judge Faust's Minute Entry simply "refers the parties to Judge Roth's earlier decision and adopts the same here." (R. 866.)

On January 10, 2008, Admiral petitioned for permission to pursue an interlocutory appeal from Judge Faust's Minute Entry. (R. 872-74.) On January 30, 2008, the Utah Court of Appeals issued its order granting Admiral permission to pursue an interlocutory appeal on the following issue: "Whether the trial court erred in excluding evidence of severance damages based on loss of view from the remaining property." (R. 895.)

On November 28, 2008, the Court of Appeals affirmed the ruling of the District Court. (Addendum Tab 1.)

In its Memorandum Decision, the Utah Court of Appeals noted, as Judge Roth had, the harshness as to Admiral of its ruling:

We acknowledge that application of the abutment rule in this case may seem harsh, given that Admiral's proximity to the now-elevated I-15 is very close and that its property abuts land taken for the overall project. Still, the ease of application and the predictability engendered by a bright-line rule are of such obvious benefit in this area of the law that if the abutment rule is to be moderated, it must come at the direction of our Supreme Court rather than of this court.

(Addendum Tab 1.)

On January 8, 2009, Admiral filed a Petition for Writ of Certiorari. That Petition was granted by the Utah Supreme Court on April 17, 2009.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

The decision of the Court of Appeals, which excludes evidence of severance damages based upon loss of view from Admiral's remaining property, is flawed for multiple reasons. First, the ruling conflicts with Article 1, Section 22 of the Utah Constitution. Second, the ruling conflicts with this Court's decision in Ivers v. Utah Dept. of Transp., 2007 UT 19, 154 P.3d 802. Third, the Court of Appeals' decision to exclude evidence of severance damages based on loss of view will allow UDOT to reap a windfall at Admiral's expense. Finally, it is impossible for Admiral to segregate its loss of view damages from its overall severance damage amount. Accordingly, the Court should reverse the Court of Appeals' November 28, 2008 Memorandum Decision and remand this matter for further proceedings.

ARGUMENT

POINT I

The trial court's decision, affirmed by the Utah Court of Appeals, to exclude evidence of severance damage from loss of view, conflicts with Article 1, Section 22 of the Utah Constitution.

Both Amendment V of the United States Constitution and Article I, Section 22 of the Utah Constitution prohibit the taking of private property without just compensation.

In carrying out these constitutional mandates, Utah Code Ann. § 78B-6-511 provides that in a condemnation action the court, jury or referee must ascertain and assess:

(1)(a) the value of the property sought to be condemned and all improvements pertaining to the realty;

(c) if it consists of different parcels, the value of each parcel and of each estate or interest in each shall be separately assessed;

(2) if the property sought to be condemned constitutes only a part of a larger parcel, the damages which will accrue to the portion not sought to be condemned by reason of its severance from the portion sought to be condemned and the construction of the improvement in the manner proposed by the plaintiff;

The compensation to which an owner is entitled for "severance damage" to the remainder under subsection (2) is the difference in the fair market value of the owner's remaining property before and after the taking. See, e.g., State v. Cooperative Sec. Corp. of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 247 P.2d 269, 271 (Utah 1952); Carpet Barn v.

State, 786 P.2d 770, 772-73 (Utah Ct. App. 1990).¹ Such a determination can only be made by considering all of the relevant facts and circumstances that affect market value:

In making the [severance damage] appraisal, it is not only permissible, but necessary to consider all of the facts and circumstances that a prudent and willing buyer and seller, with knowledge of the facts, would take into account in arriving at market value.

J.D. Eaton, Real Estate Valuation in Litigation, 316 (1995) (quoting State Road Com'n v. Rohan, 487 P.2d 857, 859 (Utah 1971)). The effect of the taking on fair market value, therefore, should be the focal point of the assessment of severance damages to the remainder in the present case.

As stated in Bagford v. Ephraim City, 904 P.2d 1095, 1098 (Utah 1995):

[u]nder general principles of eminent domain, property is not limited to land or improvements thereon, id., but “[e]very species of property which the public needs may require . . . (including) legal and equitable rights of every description . . . liable to be appropriated.”

Id. (citation omitted). Moreover, this Court has clearly set the rules by which just compensation for such a taking should be determined:

For compensation to be fair and just it must reflect fair value of the land to the landowner. Just compensation means the owners must be put in as good a position money wise as they would have occupied had their property not been taken.

Utah State Road Commission v. Friberg, 687 P.2d 821, 828 (Utah 1984). Just compensation is the difference in fair market value of the owner’s property before and after the taking. See Utah Dept. of Transp. v. Ray Co. Corp., 599 P.2d 481 (Utah 1979).

¹ Utah courts have long utilized the market value of property as the yardstick for determining recovery in eminent domain cases. See, e.g., Southern Pacific Co. v. Arthur, 352 P.2d 693, 695 (Utah 1960).

Despite the fact that no exception is made in these constitutional mandates or in Utah law for special treatment of UDOT in condemnation cases, UDOT has repeatedly asked Utah courts to sanction violations by it of the “just compensation” requirement and permit it to take valuable property rights without payment of compensation. This is so despite the fact that no other condemning authority, including the United States, is given that right.

Utah cases which have permitted the taking of privately held rights without payment of compensation make no effort to reconcile the undeniable inconsistency and conflict of such takings with the above quoted constitutional, statutory or case law. No justification is given for the unfair and forced transfer to UDOT of substantial property rights without payment of any compensation, let alone just compensation.

This case presents a stark example of the inconsistency and unfairness of the UDOT’s position. Each of the parcels taken had been purchased by Admiral based upon appraised fair market value. It is undisputed that substantial severance damages resulted from the taking. However, the trial court and the Court of Appeals approved, with some reluctance, UDOT’s request that it be exempt from the obligation all other condemning authorities have to meet, and provide just compensation for the property rights taken from Admiral. At the time Admiral purchased each of the two parcels, it could not have known or expected that UDOT would take a significant portion of the value Admiral purchased without having to pay anything for that value.

POINT II

The trial court's decision, affirmed by the Utah Court of Appeals, to exclude evidence of severance damages based on loss of view conflicts with the Utah Supreme Court's decision in Ivers v. Utah Dept. of Transp., 2007 UT 19, 154 P.3d 802 .

In February of 2007, the Utah Supreme Court issued its decision in Ivers v. Utah Dept. of Transp., 2007 UT 19, 154 P.3d 802, essentially rewriting important rules regarding severance damages relating to loss of view and visibility. The Utah Supreme Court declared that “existing Utah law does recognize an easement of view from one’s property as a protectable property right.” Id. at ¶ 16. The trial court’s Minute Entry in this case, affirmed by the Court of Appeals, fails to address, and in important respects is directly contrary to, the Ivers decision.

In Ivers, just like the present case, UDOT argued that the landowner was not entitled to any damages for loss of view because “[n]o portion of the raised highway, its footings, or its foundation was constructed on the condemned land; rather, the condemned land was used for the creation of the frontage road and for improvements to Shephard Lane.” Id. at ¶ 3. Despite this fact, the court in Ivers ruled that loss of view severance damages are appropriate “when the view-impairing structure is built on land other than the condemned land, but the condemned land is used as part of a single project and that use is essential to completion of the project.” Id. at ¶ 26.

It would be difficult to find a case more on point with the present case than Ivers. In that case:

[T]he State condemned a 0.048-acre portion of Arby's 0.416-acre lot in order to build a one-way frontage road parallel to, and connecting with, the newly widened and elevated highway.

No portion of the raised highway, its footings, or its foundation was constructed on the condemned land; rather, the condemned land was used for the creation of the frontage road and for improvements to Shephard Lane.

The elevation of the highway has obstructed both the view to the east from Arby's land and the visibility of Arby's property from the highway.

[T]he pursuant loss of view and visibility, diminished the market value of the remaining land.

Id. at ¶¶ 2-5. After reviewing the facts, the Utah Supreme Court stated as follows:

[T]he raised highway . . . was not built in any part on the condemned portion of Arby's land. Rather, the condemned land was used for the construction of a small portion of the frontage road. The frontage road itself causes no damage to the view from Arby's remaining land. However, . . . the land was condemned as part of UDOT's plan to raise the highway and was therefore condemned as part of a single project.

Whether severance damages are awardable hinges on whether the severance of the condemned property, and the use of that property, caused damage to the remaining property. Utah Code section 78-34-10(2) describes severance damages as those damages "which will accrue to the portion [of property] not sought to be condemned by reason of its severance from the portion sought to be condemned and the construction of the improvement in the manner proposed by the plaintiff." This section has no express requirement that the view-impairing structure be built directly on the condemned land. Rather, it only requires that the severance damages be caused by the condemnation of, and use of, the property.

Id. at ¶¶ 17-18 (emphasis added).

Based upon these principles, the Supreme Court made the following ruling:

When land is condemned as part of a single project—even if the view-impairing structure itself is built on property other than that which was condemned—if the use of the condemned property is essential to the completion of the project as a whole, the property owner is entitled to severance damages. Logically, if the project could not be built without taking the condemned land, the impairment of view caused by the completion of the project could and would not have arisen “but for” the condemnation. This is the very essence of cause.

Id. at ¶ 21 (emphasis added).

The key facts noted by the Utah Supreme Court in the Ivers case are for all essential purposes identical to the facts in the present case:

1. Both cases involved the taking of property that was an essential part of the overall project.²
2. In both cases, the elevated roadway blocked the view from the remaining property.
3. In neither case was the view offending structure constructed on the land taken.
4. In both cases, the property taken was used by UDOT to construct an access road and other improvements related to the project that separated the damaged remainder property from the project improvements.
5. The remaining property abuts the property taken to relocate the access road and a large storm drain.

These facts satisfy the Supreme Court’s ultimate holding in Ivers that:

²It is undisputed that the taking of Admiral’s property was necessary and essential for the I-15 project. This can be shown through UDOT’s own condemnation documents. (R. 673, 678-684).

With respect to lost view, severance damages are appropriate under Utah Code section 78-34-10 where a portion of property is condemned by the state and the condemnation of that land causes damage to the noncondemned portion of land. Damage to the noncondemned portion of land is “caused” by the severance . . . when the view-impairing structure is built on land other than the condemned land, but the condemned land is used as part of a single project and that use is essential to completion of the project.

Id. at ¶ 26 (emphasis added). That is exactly what has occurred in this case.

Despite the obvious similarities between the Ivers case and the present case, the Court of Appeals summarily dismissed the Ivers decision as distinguishable. Moreover, the decision of the Court of Appeals to exclude evidence of severance damages based on loss of view fails to note that the facts of the present case comply fully with all of the requirements of the Ivers decision and of Utah Code Ann. § 78B-6-511(2).³

The case of Utah State Road Commission v. Miya, 526 P.2d 926 (Utah 1974), cited in passing by the Court of Appeals, is not on point. The offending structure in that case was in fact erected “within the existing right-of-way.”

The Court there noted:

The rights of access, light, and air are easements appurtenant to the land of an abutting owner on a street; they constitute property rights forming part of the owner’s estate. These substantial property rights, although subject to reasonable regulation, may not be taken away without just compensation.

³Utah Code Ann. § 78B-6-511(2) provides:

(2) if the property sought to be condemned constitutes only a part of a larger parcel, the damages which will accrue to the portion not sought to be condemned by reason of its severance from the portion sought to be condemned and the construction of the improvement in the manner proposed by the plaintiff;

One of the rights appurtenant to abutting property is that of receiving light and air from the highway and an abutting owner is entitled to compensation for infringement of his right to light and air by a structure in the highway, even if it is a proper highway use.

An owner of land abutting on a street is also in possession of an easement of view, which constitutes a property right which may not be taken without just compensation.

As can be noted in the quoted excerpts, the Court's decision did not preclude claims for severance damages where, as here, the offending structure in fact caused substantial damage to the remainder that abuts the land taken as an "essential part of the project" for relocation of the access road and a large storm drain. Nor does the Court there indicate that the abutting "street" or "highway" must be owned by the Department of Highways.⁴

In summary, the Court of Appeals failed to recognize the factual similarities between this case and the Ivers case. Additionally, the decision of the Court of Appeals does not deal with the clear violation of the constitutional requirement that just compensation be paid for the taking of substantial property rights, but instead simply opts for "the ease of application and the predictability engendered by a brite-line rule [which] are of such obvious benefit in this area of the law. . . ."

⁴ Also not on point is the case of State v. Harvey Real Estate, 2002 UT 107, 57 P.3d 1088, which was simply cited but not discussed by the Court of Appeals. That case involved (1) a claim for closure of an intersection and (2) abandonment by UDOT but no claim for loss of view or visibility. See id.

POINT III

The decision to exclude evidence of severance damages based on loss of view will allow UDOT to reap a windfall at Admiral's expense.

As noted above, the so-called "brite-line rule" adopted by the Court of Appeals would permit the UDOT to appropriate a substantial portion of the property value belonging to Admiral. The decision to eliminate the value of view from the property from fair market value provides a very significant windfall in the amount of that value to UDOT at Admiral's expense because that value was specifically included in the price Admiral paid for Lot 17 just two years previously, and for Lot 16 at the same time of the take.

Admiral's expert, Jerry Webber, made three separate appraisals of the properties in question. The first appraisal, concerning the fair market value of Lot 16 and Lot 17, was dated November 25, 1994. Admiral purchased Lot 17 in March of 1995, based upon the fair market value as reflected in that appraisal. Mr. Webber made a second appraisal that concerned the fair market value of Lot 16 in October of 1997. Admiral purchased Lot 16 in July of 1998, based upon the fair market value as reflected in that appraisal.

The harshness of the trial court's ruling is demonstrated by Admiral's purchase of the property for its appraised fair market value, which clearly included both the value of view and visibility, only to have UDOT take the property without paying any compensation for view or visibility. Thus, the substantial value representing both view and visibility are automatically shifted from Admiral to UDOT without a single dollar being paid as compensation. This violates the constitutional mandate that property not be taken without payment of just compensation. See Utah Const. Art. I, § 22; Southern Pac. Co. v. Arthur, 352 P.2d 693, 695 (Utah 1960) (“The standard of what is ‘just compensation’ in the ordinary case is the market value of the property taken, that is what a willing buyer would pay to a willing seller.”).

There is no justifiable reason why UDOT, unlike anyone else, should be permitted to acquire valuable property rights without paying just compensation.

POINT IV

It is impossible to segregate loss of view damages from Admiral’s overall severance damage amount.

In preparing his appraisal report, Mr. Webber determined Admiral’s severance damages to the remainder, based upon all of the factors that a prudent and willing buyer and seller, with knowledge of the facts, would take into account in arriving at fair market value, including but not limited to, view and visibility. Mr. Webber was unable despite extensive study and effort to identify comparable sales that did not take into account both view from the property and visibility of the property from I-15. (R. at R772-75.) View and visibility are critical factors that affect any piece of property along the I-15 corridor. Any property located adjacent to I-15 will have a combination of both such values and it is impossible to allocate and assign a separate value to each. Licensed appraisers cannot speculate as to such values, which can vary widely from one property to another, and cannot be justified with true comparables generally used and accepted in appraisal practices. As a result, it is impossible to segregate out loss of view damages from Admiral’s overall severance damage amount.

Moreover, the trial court's Minute Entry and the Court of Appeals' Memorandum Decision are both directly contrary to the Utah Supreme Court's decision in State Road Comm'n v. Rohan, 487 P.2d 857 (Utah 1971). In Rohan, the State Road Commission took a position similar to the position espoused by UDOT in this case. The State argued that it was improper to permit the defendants' expert to take into consideration and testify concerning diminution in value resulting from increased noise from the highway. The Utah Supreme Court rejected the State's position and held that the testimony of the expert who considered the increase in noise was properly allowed, notwithstanding the fact that it would have been improper to segregate and evaluate noise as a separate item of damage. The Rohan court held that there should not be any attempt to isolate and appraise as a separate item of damage any loss of value due to noise or any other such intangible factor; and this is true even where there has been an actual taking of property. Any such attempt to so segregate and place a separate money value on the effect the factor of noise would have upon property would inevitably involve the uncertainty and impracticability above referred to in this decision. This should not be done either for the purpose of making an award of a separate item of damage, as was dealt with in the Williams case, nor for the purpose of fixing a separate amount to be deducted from the severance damage to the remaining property as plaintiff contends here.

On the other hand, in order to correctly evaluate the severance damages, i.e., the damage to the remaining property, it is obvious that it should be viewed in the composite as it will be after the taking and after the improvement has been constructed. In making the appraisal, it is not only permissible but necessary to consider all of the facts and circumstances that a prudent and willing buyer and seller, with knowledge of the facts, would take into account in arriving at its market value. The testimony of the defendant's expert which is here under attack indicates that he conformed to that formula. He properly and candidly included the facts that the new freeway adjacent to the property, with the attendant increase in traffic and noises, were among the factors considered in making his appraisal. But there was no attempt to segregate and place a separate money value thereon. We think the trial court was well advised in admitting his testimony and that no prejudicial error was committed.

Id. at 859 (emphasis added).

The same is true in this case. Mr. Webber properly considered loss of view as one of many factors that reduce the market value of Admiral's remaining property. The decrease in value resulting from loss of view cannot be segregated out and assigned a separate money value in assessing the total mix of factors that Mr. Webber considered. Mr. Webber stated as much in his affidavit. In fact, it would have been improper for Mr. Webber to attempt to segregate out a separate amount related to loss of visibility and deduct that amount from the overall severance damages. See Rohan, 487 P.2d at 859 ("This should not be done either for the purpose of making an award of a separate item of damage, . . . nor for the purpose of fixing a separate amount to be deducted from the severance damage to the remaining property as plaintiff contends here.").⁵

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, it was error to exclude evidence of Admiral's severance damages relating to loss of view from the remaining property. Therefore, the Court should reverse the trial court's December 27, 2007 Minute Entry and the Memorandum Decision of the Court of Appeals, and remand this matter for further proceedings consistent with the Court's ruling herein.

⁵Counsel for UDOT was extremely critical of the Utah Supreme Court's decision in Rohan, referring to it as an "embarrassment to the Court." (R. 994 at 48-49.) Despite counsel's personal opinion regarding this Court's decision, Rohan has never been overturned and remains binding case law.
